Reading Test A

Bill is 75 years old and he's never been married. But both his brother and his two sisters married and had children, so Bill has lots of nieces and nephews. He loves them very much and has always been generous to them. He can afford to be.

When Bill left school at the age of fifteen, he started a small business which soon grew into a large company. By the time he was forty, Bill was a millionaire. His family all wanted him to find a wife, but he used to smile and say he was too busy working. When his nieces and nephews had their own families, Bill decided to pay for his great-nieces' and great-nephews', his nieces' and nephews' children, university education. He didn't imagine that it would lead to romance, but it did.

His eldest great-niece, Annie, was the first to go to university. She had always wanted to study in Australia and thanks to her great-uncle, she could go there. When she was in Australia, Annie often wrote to Bill. In one letter, she told him about the lady she was staying with. She was a widow, and the same age as Bill. She was an Englishwoman who went to Australia with her husband in the 1950s. She was born in London, but during the Second World War she was sent to the country and she lived in Bill's village for a few years. Her name was Mary Williams.

Annie was surprised when she got an email from her great-uncle telling her to meet him at Sydney Airport the next day, and to bring Mary Williams with her. When Bill and Mary met, they recognized each other at once. They remembered playing together as children in Bill's village and they both remembered crying when Mary went back to London after the war.

Well, Bill and Mary are getting married next month, just 65 years after they first met.
